1. When the article is used in Greek, the noun is said to be __________________ or __________________; when it is not used, the noun is __________________.

2. Articles are used to show whether we are referring to things that are __________________ to the __________________ and the __________________.

3. Many times the definite article, “the,” behaves very much like the __________________
   __________________ __________________ __________________.

4. Remember, a noun may be __________________ without the __________________.

5. When a definite noun lacks the article, stress is being placed on the __________________ aspect of the noun rather than its __________________.

6. Write out Colwell’s Rule and give an example.

7. Write out the Granville Sharp Rule, give an example, and two exceptions to the rule.